

Featuring Full-Lengths!

Ships

I suppose it's one man's opinion as to which subcategory of Full-Lengths is the nicest. One collector might say 'Full-Length Diners' while another might point to Full-Length Autos. It's a matter of opinion, I suppose.

For myself, I've always been especially partial to Full-Length Ships. Those ships just seem to need that extra space to really show their artistic worth. They just need the room!...And when they get it, you have a really nice Full-Length cover. (Hmmm...nothing like a full-length aircraft carrier!)

Perhaps not surprisingly, you'll find most of your Full-Length Ships in your Navy Ship collection...or someone else's! By a quick count in my own albums, there are at least 80.

You'll also find some in your Ship Line collection. And then, as I recall, there are a couple of nice full-length gambling ships, as well. Of course, I'm just describing the covers I know of. Who knows what else is out there?

There are a number of interesting ways you could arrange such a collection:

- 1) By type - carriers, submarines, cruise ships, etc.
- 2) By age - Pre-War and Post War

...and so on.

Anyway you cut it, these are really nice looking covers. And, depending on the size of your eventual collection, the possibilities of displays are great!
