

“Why don’t you list your categories in the roster

(This will only apply to those who don’t)

[March - 62 responding]

-I never listed my categories because I wasn't organized enough to trade my dupes.	2
-Just never got “that far” in identifying my own collection	2
-I stopped trading by mail/Don’t have enough to trade	2
-I don’t think many collectors actually use the roster anymore.	1	Well, this one didn’t work.
-Putting categories on the roster limits a lot of collectors as to what they can send for trade	1	Despite what it says above, most of the people responding did have their categories listed in the roster, and I only heard from a few of those who actually didn’t. I only counted the latter responses, which accounts for the spotty results.
-I have a lot of personal things going on.	1
-I'm a "General" collector and my list would be too long to fit in the roster.	1
-No particular reason. I'm a 'general' collector, and thought that by not listing specific categories, but indicating that I am willing to trade, would mean that I liked them all. Listing nothing may have been a mistake.	1
-At this time I'm not listing because I'm not actively collecting.	1	Still, the answers may be found to be enlightening.
-Categories keep changing. Got to the point I don’t know what categories I collect anymore.	1
-I don’t list a category because I don’t have a category. I collect whatever I happen to come in contact with that has covers.	1
