
KNOW YOUR COVERS!

Mirro-Glos was Universal Match Company's trademark for its covers glossy, laminated covers; 1941-?. These covers tend to feel heavier and stiffer, and they look great...as long as the plastic overlay hasn't begun to bubble or peel away. Sometime after 1960, Universal went to a different process to produce the glossy exterior; I'm not sure if they kept Mirro-Glos as the trademark for the new process.

There are actually quite a few, but only a handful actually carry the trademark. My collection numbers 1,991 at the moment...and I don't know a single other collector that collects them!
